Dr. and Mrs. James E. Logan gave one of the largest and most brilliant dancing parties of the season at the Country Club Friday evening. Two hundred and seventy-five invitations and, in spite of the long, cold drive necessitated, "everybody" was there and enjoyed the evening to the utmost. The large raftered rooms presented a most picturesque appearance. Numbers of diags representing every nation were draped on the walls and among the rafters with spiendid effect and crackling wood fires in the great fireplaces were a prominent part of the picture. The wide verandas were inclosed and warmed so that no breath of the north wind could intrude. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Logan were Miss Neer, of Portland, Ore., and Miss Partridge, of Leavenworth, in whose honor the affair was given.

Mrs. St. Clair Streett gave a charming luncheon Wednesday as a special compliment to a number of unusu tractive visiting women. The guests were:

Society patronesses are divided into two classes—the must-bes and the glad-to-bes, and both have troubles of their own.

The must-bes are smart women whose names appear in connection with everything of any social importance in the town. This may or may not be to their liking, but because they are must-bes their names head the list. They are besought and entreated and requested and demanded by friends and strangers alike, to patronize this thing and that until they are driven to beg for mercy.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowersock, will be ut home Tuesdays in April at 1037. Pennsylyania avenue.

Admirable music, a spacious and artistic home, lovely floral deets atlons, and delicious hosters, made Mrs. Concerts, which were the whole happily blended by the far weed, the whole happily blended by the far weed the whole happily blended by the far weed the whole happily blended by the far weed the week of the week and the substance were livited to meet Miss Christine Tuttle of Bishon Tuttle of St. Louis.

The musical programme, Birnished by the far week and the substance were livited to meet Miss Christine Tuttle death of the far week and the week and the week were a soft will be the dark shining green leaves of the wild smilinx and shining green leaves of the wild shining and that until they are driven to beg for the sections. Not infreed to buy the standard of the section of the standard of the stan chosen six or eight on these occasions gives them unquestionable social prestige. Moreover, a woman who is bringing out a daughter and can make herself a popular patroness of dances does a clever thing for as patroness and so hostess on these occasions she wields a certain power which can be used judiciously to the advantage of the debutante.

So the glad-to-be patronesses seize every opportunity to strengthen their position while the must-bes resignedly head the lists.

The guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Tomb Thursday evening, asked to meet Miss Sara Harbeson, were afforded delightful entertainment. Last Wednesday morning St. Patrick's church was the scene of a pretty and impressive ceremony, when Miss Teresa Joséphine Murphy and Mr. Bruce Eugene Phipps were united in marriage by Rev. Father T. F. Lillis, in the presence of a large number of friends. The bridal party entered the church to the sweet strains of the wedding march, played by the organist, Professor Ben Nentwig, and the solemn vows were plighted before the altar, which was bedecked with palms and numerous lights.

The bride's gown was of dainty white organdle trimmed with lace and ribbons and worn over a slip of satin. Bride roses held the tulle vell in place and formed the hand bouquet. She was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Murphy, and the groom by Mr. J. Lane. The ushers were Mr. Howard Campbell and Dr. M. C. Lovell. Mr. Howard Campbell and Dr. M. C. Lovell.

A pretty wedding of last Tuesday even-

Mr. M. Holzmark, Mr. Spire, Mr. Jordon Benjamin.

A pretty wedding of last Tuesday evening was that of Miss Florence Williams and Mr. W. A. Tedford, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Williams, 221 Campbell street. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. The mantel in the first parior, in front of which the bride and groom stood to receive congratulations, was banked with American Beauty roses and ferns, and each chandelier was hung with vines. In the second parlor fruit punch was served by Miss Amelia Seifert from a bowl which rested on a bed of pink roses and ferns. At 8 o'clock the bride and groom entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march. Miss Williams wore an imported gown of purple silk grenadine with narrow black velvet stripes, a slight train, the yoke of white silk tucked, the front made of jetted lace over white silk and edged with blue velvet. She carried a large bouquet of bride's roses. After the ceremony Miss Mabel Durker sang "Without Thee" and "Just One Girl." Mrs. W. R. Williams was assisted in entertaining by Miss Mary McGinnis, who wore a gown of black silk princess, with a white embroidered chiffon from over white silk, and carried white carnations. A wedding supper was served to fifty guests. Mr. and Mrs. Tedford were the recipients of many beautiful presents, most of them being in silver. They left that evening on their wedding tour, and will be at home to friends after February 25. The out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. L. Baldridge and Mr. H. Baldridge, of Milan, Mo., uncle and cousin of the bride.

In Swelldom. The legal fraternity of this city is very well represented among the good dressers, but there is one in particular who is noted for the neatness and fashion of everything that he puts on. At present this young man is busily engaged in taking care of the interests of his constituents at Jefferson City, where he holds a seat in the lower house. And from the reports that come from Missouri's capital, he is in a fair way to distinguish himself.

There is a good story told on him that is just at present going the rounds, and it is very worthy of repetition. He is more of a corporation lawyer than anything else, but once in a while he has been called upon to show his knowledge of the criminal law. It was not so very long ago that he was down in the territory, Oklahoms, and he undertook the defense of a negro who he undertook the defense of a negro who had killed a white man. The feeling against the negro was intense, and it had been only through the most etrenuous ef-forts of the officers that he had been permitted to live for his trial. It was evident that an unprejudiced jury could not be obtained in the little place where not be obtained in the little place with the crime was committed, and it was the intention of the Kansas City man to ask for a change of venue. After he had worked on the case for some time, he ascertained that the judge was going to deny anything like a change and that his man was to be tried and hanged as soon as possible. The lawyer thought long and hard over the matter, and finally hit upon a scheme which he thought would be successful in influencing the court essful in influencing the court.

By the liberal use of money he succeeded in securing a dozen men, who, when the negro was brought into the courtroom, were to cry, "Hang him! Hang him!" The lawyer thought that this would be evidence of the prejudice against his client that could not be overlooked by the court. defendant was brought into court. As soon went up: "Hang him! Hang him! Hang the black room, while the attorney smiled to him-self as he saw that his little scheme succeeded. But to his horror the cries re-doubled in force, the crowd surged in an taken out and hanged to a convenient tree. The young Kansas City attorney now confines himself entirely to corporation law and politics.

There is one article of a man's wardrobe that never changes, one the structure and appointments of which are as inviolable s the laws of the Medes and the Persians and that is the full dress suit. The trousers may be made a little tighter, to be sure, or the tails of the coat slightly longsure, or the tails of the coat slightly long-er, or perhaps the facing of the lapels may have some minor change, but beyond these minor affairs it is impossible to go. Man has set his foot down upon this and all changes that have ever been attempt-ed, and there have been many, have failed most woefully. And there never will be any radical change, at least until the entire form of man's dress changes and the are again wearing the toga of the old Roman days or the blanket of the Indian. "Costly thy raiment as thy purse can buy," rich, but not gaudy," that sentiment of good old Billy Shakespeare, finds an echo in the heart of every man of taste and re-

Once on a time, and not so very long ago, there was a tailors' convention, and after a hard fight the "progressive" element in the association succeeded in get-ting a resolution passed making a radica change in the full dress, but even with every tailor of note in the land behind it, with all the fashion plates adorned with ly refused to have anything to do with it, and since then the tailors have con-fined themselves strictly to small changes just enough to make all of the men who pretend to dress purchase a new dress suit each year.

One cannot help admiring the audacity of some of the outfitters who show fancy evening vests as quite the proper thing. There is quite a movement on foot to ex-tend the reign of the fancy vest of the day to the de rigeur costume of the even-ing. Yet who wants to wear a crimson silk waistcoat in conjunction with the black clawhammer? There have been a few of the young men in the very uitra sets of the East who have gone in for this on the plea that it is a distinction from the garb worn by the walters. There is nothing more absurd in the world than these tales about gentlemen being taken for waiters. He must be a very dense individual indeed who cannot tell the one from the other. even should they be arrayed exactly alike. The gaudily colored dress vest will be a wear withstands every assault that is made man's wardrobe, the handkerchief, is given very little attention, and it is often observ ed that a man who is perfectly groomed and dressed otherwise will violate all of the laws of fashion in the use of the handkerchief.
